- 2 Weeks
  - ☐ Assemble registration packets — include name tags
- 1 Week
  - ☐ Call caterers with final number

Since each reunion is different, some of these guidelines may not apply to you. Keep in mind, however, that there are very few things that you can do TOO early!

ALUMNI RECORDS

In today's mobile society, it can be difficult to keep alumni records up-to-date. The Northwestern State University Alumni Association can assist you by providing you with the most current addresses. A list and/or mailing labels can be generated by the NSU Alumni Association. Please allow four weeks to receive the mailing list. Again, it is never too early to start! Email services are also available.

Under no circumstances can alumni lists be used for solicitations or political purposes. Ask the reunion coordinator for further details and for the paperwork required for permission to receive an alumni list.

BUDGET AND FINANCE

Once you have a good idea of what your reunion will entail, it is very important to set a budget. This is one of the most difficult but important things to do. By calculating all of your costs initially, you can set realistic prices that will cover all of the reunion's expenses.

Step One: Make a list of all of the expenses that you expect to incur. Don't forget to include tax and gratuity, bartending fees, audio-visual fees, awards, photographer fees, etc. Consult the list on pages 10-11 for additional items to consider.

Step Two: Consider sponsors and provide the opportunity for donations. Do any members of your organization have business or personal connections that could potentially defray the costs of the reunion? Even something as simple as having items donated for door prizes or receiving a discount on printing can be helpful in enhancing the reunion and/or cutting costs. In addition, you may want to consider asking group members who are unable to attend the reunion to make a contribution (monetary or otherwise) to further defray expenses. You might be surprised at how many people are willing to help.

Step Three: Set the cost per guest. You may choose to put one price tag on the whole package, or you may choose to itemize the events. The package approach is simpler and is recommended for smaller reunions; the itemized approach allows more flexibility for your guests, and works well with larger groups and multiple-day reunions.

You may want to consider "padding" your prices by a couple of dollars and/or including a nominal registration fee, particularly if you are starting your reunion account with a $0 balance. Inevitably, no matter how well groups plan, one or two unanticipated expenses always seem to surface after the budget has been set. Adding a few extra dollars to the registration fee ensures that you will collect enough money to pay all of your reunion bills. Any extra money can be left in the account to encourage future alumni activities, used to thank your committee for their hard work, or donated to your corresponding student organization.

COMMUNICATION AND PUBLICITY

Nothing is more important than keeping members of your group informed about what is going on. Here are some different techniques:

- “Mark Your Calendar” Postcard or Letter – This early mailer/email can be sent out 9–12 months prior to your reunion or as soon as your dates have been selected. This works well with groups of all sizes and is easy and inexpensive. Simply include the dates, a theme, if applicable, and a promise of more information to follow.
- Confirmation Cards/Email – Ideal for larger groups, confirmation cards or an email can be sent upon receipt of the registration materials. Confirmation cards/email are especially helpful if a time change occurs on your schedule or if there is a discrepancy between the registration form and the payment.
- Registration Material – This is the most important piece you will send out. We recommend providing as much information as you can, including a schedule of events, locations, prices, and contact names and numbers that alumni can call with questions. Make sure you have designed the form to include everything you need to know about your alumni, their guests, and their intentions for the reunion. We also recommend setting a deadline for the reservation forms and checks to be returned 3–4 weeks prior to the reunion. Not everyone will make the deadline, so be prepared and know that some people may ask to sign up when they arrive for the reunion.
- Calling Committee – This is one of the most valuable forms of communication. Past experience has shown us that alumni are most likely to attend a reunion if they receive a personal contact from a friend who is also attending.

USING COMMITTEES EFFECTIVELY

Forming a reunion committee provides a number of benefits. First, it divides up the amount of work so that no one or two people feel like they get stuck doing everything and many people feel that they have a hand in the success of the reunion. Secondly, it provides for a checks-and-balances system. If there is something that you forget, chances are that someone else will catch it. Finally, and perhaps most importantly, using a committee is the best way to spread the word and thus, increase attendance.

The Calling Committee – Calling committees are your best ambassadors for generating interest in a reunion. No matter how clever the theme or how exciting the schedule, the one thing that will REALLY draw your alumni is the promise of seeing their friends again.

The idea of a calling committee is a simple one. Committee members agree to call (or write, tag, or e-mail) information about the reunion to their former classmates, urging them to attend. In addition, assuming that they will be attending, they endorse the reunion on all of your correspondence. Thus, when your alumni receive an invitation, they are receiving it from a whole committee of people rather than from just one person. A dozen names on a letterhead indicates a great deal of support and thus a large number in attendance.

When selecting committee members, try to include the most active members of your organization. If your reunion spans many years, try to include at least one representative from each class year. Your alumni will want to hear from someone they know.

We recommend giving committee members specific guidelines on what to include in their correspondence. It is also advisable to give committee members a deadline. Tasks of this type, while ultimately enjoyable, can easily get put off. When working with calling committees, we often make a formal list of which committee members have agreed to contact which alumni. This added bit of accountability will help ensure that your committee members get their contacts made.

Task Committee – Task committee members are those who are available to roll up their sleeves and help get the job done. Most committees choose to divide up specific responsibilities among committee members. (For example, one individual may be responsible for registration, one for entertainment, and another for the banquet.) The size and structure of each committee will vary. Touch base often with the committee members to make sure everyone is on the same page. Committee meetings are a great way for those committee members who are in town to report their progress to each other as well as to generate enthusiasm amongst themselves.

IDEAS TO ADD TO THE FUN

Here are some fun ideas that have been used by groups in the past to add a special touch to a reunion. Any of them would make a great project for a committee member!

- Video/Slide Show – Ask members of your organization to submit old photos to be made into a video or PowerPoint presentation to show during the reunion.
- Biography Booklet – Include a bio form in your registration materials. Ask one person to be responsible for compiling all of the completed forms into a booklet to be distributed at the reunion and mailed to absentee members. The forms can simply be photocopied or the information can be typed for a more polished look. This allows people who are unable to attend the reunion to be included in the fun.
- Memories Booklet – Ask alumni to submit memories of their time at NSU. Compile all of the memories into a book to be presented to alumni at the reunion.
- Photo Display – Ask members of your organization to send photos (old or recent) to one individual to construct a photo display. This can be done very inexpensively with items purchased at a craft store, and allows for considerable creativity and humor!
- NSU Archives – NSU Archives is a great source for information regarding NSU. They can assist with providing photos if you plan to put together a reunion booklet. Yearbooks can also be a source for photos and information.
- Fashion Show – Were uniforms or costumes a part of your organization? Ask alumni to contribute the clothing to be modeled during your reunion. Current students make great models!
- Special Name Tags – For large groups, nametags are a must. Even in the case of a smaller reunion, nametags allow spouses and children to be easily associated with group members. Why not spruce up the nametags with old yearbook photos or nicknames? The same idea can be used for place cards.
- Door Prizes – Create a contest for guests involving group member “trivia” and award prizes to the winners. Prizes can also be given for simple criteria such as the person who traveled the greatest distance or the person who has been a member of the alumni group for the longest time.
- Rituals and Traditions – Every group has different rituals and traditions. Try to incorporate these into your reunion in a creative way. If your reunion group spans many years, it may be interesting to learn how the traditions have evolved.

ITEMS TO CONSIDER

Here are some things to think about when making plans and setting your budget. You may or may not want to utilize all of these for your reunion, but it's better to consider them up front than to do so after your prices have been set!
